Sensational New Urban Romance Novel Spotlights Sacramento Accounts of a Reporter: by C. R. GRANDERSON

Sacramento, CA - Sacramento native C. R. Granderson emerges onto the writing scene with an urban romantic thriller. His first novel is a work of fiction that takes place in Sacramento, California. The contemporary novel is not your typical story of organized crime and street thugs who parlayed their outlaw earnings to finance music careers. What sets this clever novel apart is C. R. Granderson's use of anecdotes like drug lords, police corruption, love triangles, sexual encounters, strippers, and other social elements to educate readers about the issue of reparations for the African Holocaust.

"I got the idea for this book about 20 years ago, while taking a creative writing class at Sacramento City College," Coy Granderson said. "Chapters one and two are the revised short stories I had written during the class. Although I had written about 20 chapters throughout the years, I put the book on hold because I couldn't decide how to end it. Then sometime in September 2014, I developed a female character who added another dimension to the story that enabled me to finish the book."

He also indicated that the book was a way of creatively sharing some bits of American history about things discussed in many African American communities or presented in African American studies. Granderson realizes some people will not read the book simply because they object to the idea of reparations for slavery. He said most Americas didn't want slavery ended either that is why there was a civil war. But those who do read the book will enjoy the story.

Book Description

C. R. Granderson's novel "Accounts of a Reporter" is about Jamal Montgomery, a brass Manhattan investigative journalist who is estranged from his pregnant ex wife Desiree due to her infidelity. Jamal jets out of New York and lands in Sacramento, California, where he gets involved with a young sexy school teacher and hot dance choreographer, the lovely Roxanne Jones. In an attempt to force Jamal's hand at matrimony, Roxanne decides to hook up with her ex boyfriend Deion St. James, the international drug dealer G-Dogg. Jamal's investigative talents take him to Barcelona, Spain, where he uncovers the plans of G-Dogg's crime boss Francis DaPrato, a Barcelona aristocrat. Señor DaPrato orders a couple of corrupt detectives to put an end to Jamal's investigation and silence his journalistic life. All Jamal has is his wits, his balls and his instincts, will it be enough for him to survive?

About the Author

C. R. Granderson (close family and friends know him as Coy Rene) is a California native who was born in Sacramento. He spent his formative years in Oak Park, Rio Linda and the Watsonville, Santa Cruz, and Monterey bay areas. But, he enjoys the playboy cool places in Oakland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego bays. These venues and myriad experiences shaped his outlook on life. Coy is a proud father of three children by one wife of 40 years. He has held a myriad of titles during his 35 years of employment in the communications business. He attended Cosumnes River and Sacramento City colleges where he majored in journalism and graphic arts. Does love cover all sin? God didn't forgive his right hand man and rebellious son Lucifer but sentenced Satan to eternal hell fire and then glorified his only begotten son Joshua the Christ. So hell no, love doesn't cover all sin. Coy Rene lives in the great state of California.
